

Dear Professor Komlósi,

Thank you very much for your careful reading of my dissertation and for your thoughtful and generous evaluation of my work. I sincerely value the time and effort you devoted to the dissertation. Particularly appreciated was your recognition of the study's success and your recommendation that the title Doctor of Philosophy (PhD) be conferred upon me with the qualification of summa cum laude.

I deeply appreciated your acknowledgment that the dissertation contributes to multilingual pragmatics by showing how pragmatic competence takes shape through different constellations of linguistic experience, identity, and language use. Your recognition of the study's final "two different approaches" proposition was especially meaningful, as it directly reflects one of the central analytical intentions behind the comparative research design.

I'm also thankful for your recognition of the dissertation's unique theoretical contribution, advocating a shift away from a singular notion of "appropriate" L2 pragmatic behavior toward a more holistic understanding of pragmatic competence. This perspective aligns perfectly with the contribution I hoped the study would make, particularly to the Jordanian EFL context, where understanding of multilingual pragmatic development remains limited and is greatly needed.

Your positive assessment and recommendation are truly encouraging as I prepare for the final defense. I am grateful for your insightful comments and honored by your evaluation of the dissertation. I very much look forward to discussing the work further during the defense.

With sincere appreciation,

Ibrahim Rawshdeh
